

Token: A Journal of English Linguistics

Volume 3

Editorial information for Volume 3

Title Page and Reverse available here.

Table of Contents:

Marina Dossena

University of Bergamo, Italy

Introduction

Acknowledgements full text

Joan Beal & Marco Condorelli

University of Sheffield, England

Cut from the same CLOTH? Variation and change in the CLOTH lexical set full text

Massimo Sturiale

University of Catania, Italy

The social construction of Standard (Spoken) English: Eighteenth-century orthoepists as a “discourse community”
full text

Marina Dossena

University of Bergamo, Italy

“Dispensers of knowledge”. An initiatory investigation into nineteenth-century popular(ized) science full text

Polina Shvanyukova

University of Milan, Italy

“A cargo of coffee, sugar, and indigo”:

Transatlantic business correspondence in nineteenth-century business letter-writing manuals full text

Isabel Moskowich & Begoña Crespo

University of La Coruña, Spain

Stance is present in scientific writing, indeed. Evidence from the Coruña Corpus of English Scientific Writing full text

Sofia Zea

University of La Coruña, Spain

Attributive adjectives in eighteenth-century scientific texts from the Coruña Corpus. full text

Kevin McCafferty

University of Bergen, Norway

“I was away in another field [...] go!”. A diachronic study of the be-perfect in Irish English full text

Nataša Stojaković

University of Sarajevo, Bosnia and Herzegovina

Daisuke Suzuki

University of Kyoto, Japan

A historical study of English modal adverbs: Evidence from a combination of diachronic corpora full text

Ayumi Nonomiya

University of Sheffield, England

THOU and YOU in eighteenth-century English plays full text

© 2016 - Token: A Journal of English Linguistics

Proudly powered by WordPress. Weaver by WPWeaver.info