SEMANTIC POLARITIES AND PSYCHOPATHOLOGIES IN THE FAMILY

Permitted and Forbidden Stories

Valeria Ugazio
Translated by Richard Dixon

Routledge
Taylor & Francis Group
NEW YORK AND LONDON
CONTENTS

List of Figures viii
About the Author x
Acknowledgments xi

Introduction

1 The Construction of Psychopathological Disorders in Intersubjective Contexts 3
  1.1 Four Stories and Several Questions 3
  1.2 An Intersubjective Perspective to Psychopathology 8
  1.3 Psychopathology and Meaning 11

PART I
The Theoretical Model 17

2 Family Semantic Polarities 19
  2.1 A Conversational Definition 19
  2.2 A Clinical Example 26
  2.3 Origin of the Concept in West and East 30
  2.4 Polar Opposition and Intersubjectivity 36
  2.5 A Conversation With Three Positionings 40
  2.6 Harmony and Excellence: On the Edge of Disaster 46
  2.7 Constructing a New Conversational Position 56
  2.8 Changing Through Enigmatic Interactions 60
  2.9 Difficult Positionings 66
CONTENTS

PART II
Semantics and Psychopathologies

3 Semantics of Freedom and Phobic Disorders

3.1 A Conversation Dominated by the Semantics of Freedom  83
3.2 A Dilemma That Threatens a Narrative Plot  89
3.3 Permitted Stories and Forbidden Stories  93
3.4 The Interpersonal Context in the Here and Now: A Positioning
Balanced Precariously Between Two Subsystems  98
3.5 The “Original” Intersubjective Context: What Phobic Patients
Tell Systemic Therapists  105
3.6 Two Clinical Examples  112
3.7 A Pathogenic Cultural Premise?  122

4 Between Good and Evil: Obsessive-Compulsive Disorders  128

4.1 When Life Takes the Side of Evil  128
4.2 The Origins of Doubt  133
4.3 Life: A Forbidden Story?  141
4.4 The Original Triangle  148
4.5 Will Therapy Make Me Feel Worse?  156
4.6 Will You Help Me Get Rid of Bad Natasha?  166
4.7 The Idea of Abstinent Goodness and Psychotherapy  175

5 The Semantics of Power: Anorexia, Bulimia, and Other
Eating Problems  181

5.1 More or Less  181
5.2 The Dilemma and the Permitted Stories  189
5.3 Adolescence: A Critical Period  195
5.4 The Intersubjective Context in the Here and Now: An Instigation and a Double Disillusionment  198
5.5 A Family Story over Three Generations  202
5.6 The Idea of Equality as a Breaking Down of Differences  212

6 Depression: Denied Belonging  223

6.1 What Serotonin Doesn’t Explain  223
6.2 A Conversation in Which Some Belong and Some are Excluded  228
6.3 The Dilemma and the Adaptive Function of Depression  233
6.4 The Intersubjective Context in the Here and Now  238
CONTENTS

6.5 Reconstructing the Original Triangle in Therapy 245
6.6 "Crazy Alcoholic Whore" 248
6.7 Resources in Depressive Organizations 258

Conclusion: Therapeutic Perspectives 261

7 Family Semantics and the Therapeutic Relationship 261

7.1 And What Position Does the Therapist Take? 263
7.2 As Many Different Therapies as There Are Semantics? 275

Notes 282
Bibliography 293
Index 312